Essay

Heat, hills and ghost towns all are features of setting that affect the cyclist.
First, the heat dehydrates and exhausts him, almost causing him a heat stroke.
He starts dinking more often, and nearly runs out of water. Next is the hills.
They can take massive amounts of energy to climb. Which adds to his dehydration. Finally the ghost towns. They make his journey seem hopeless.
Which could cause him to lose the will to carry on.
