Essay

The story "Winter Hi-biscus" by Min-fong Ho. The author concludes the story in a what seems like incomplete paragraph. The girl Sa-eng vows to take her driver test over when the spring comes. When Sa-eng was holding the plant, she felt cold and helpless like how the plant did. Then she noticed the potted plant that Sa-eng was holding, its leaves quivering in the wind. By Sa-eng's mother reassuring her that she was okay with her choice it made Sa-eng grow as a person, "I'm glad you got it." @ CA PS 1 mother also says, "look how root-bound it is, poor thing." That in a way describes Sa-eng clinging to stay connected with her country. Sa-eng's mother also tells her of now the plant will surely survive. When the spring comes the plant will be just as strong, and so will Sa-eng. Which is why the author leaves off where she did
